

KMF young stars at WorldSkills

The quality of the apprentices at KMF (Precision Sheet Metal) has once again been recognised with two of its rising stars going through the selection process for the WorldSkills Leipzig 2013. The process was intense and with only one place available on the team for sheet metal engineers the competition was tough. However, having completed a series of stringent skills tests, which included developing and fabricating a patio heater, the independent judges selected KMF's Matt Page to be the UK's representative, with his colleague Jake Repsys also travelling to Leipzig as first reserve.

For further information
www.kmf.co.uk